JAPANESE DECIDE TO SEND TROOPS INTO CHINESE TERRITORY

Naval Officials State Landing Party Necessary to Protect Nationals and Property—Leaders Decide Nanking's Government Unable to Prevent Anti-Japanese Incidents

TOKIO, Sept. 21 (AP).—Japanese naval officers prepared tonight to send a landing party into China to protect Japanese nationals and property. In announcing the decision, the details of which were not disclosed, a Navy Office communique said:

"Anti-Japanese terrorism has extended across the whole Chinese continent and is becoming rampant."

The communique included a long list of killings and bombings it alleged were experienced by Japanese in China during the past year.

A spokesman, however, insisted "our demands to China are very moderate."

SELF-DEFENCE MEASURE
The landing party was decided upon at a conference presided over by Admiral Osami Nagano, Minister of the Navy. It was said the conference decided the Nanking Government had not proved itself able to prevent anti-Japanese incidents in China.

"Japanese naval authorities," the announcement said, "consider it necessary and inevitable to resort to measures of self-defence."
"Two Japanese destroyers," it was reported from Shanghai, were taking a strong detachment of marines to Hankow, where a Japanese consular policeman was killed Saturday.

Premier to Meet Manitoba Legislature in January Without Majority

WINNIPEG, Sept. 21 (AP).—Premier Bracken of Manitoba rebuilt his Liberal-Progressive Cabinet today without Social Credit representation and prepared to meet the Manitoba Legislature in January without a clear majority.

Four new faces appeared in the reorganized Cabinet of nine, made necessary through resignations and defections in the general election of July 27, when the government's membership in the fifty-five-member Legislature was reduced from thirty-six to twenty-three.

Premier Bracken said his new government, with the support of the Social Credit members, would seek solution to economic and other problems in a sound way.

NEW CABINET MEMBERS

The four new members of the Cabinet are Stuart S. Garson, Fairford, Provincial Treasurer; Ivan Schultz, Mountain, Minister of Education; D. L. Campbell, Lakelse, Minister of Agriculture, and Saviour Marcoux, Laverdun, minister without portfolio.

The first session of the new Legislature is expected to open late in January. Premier Bracken, after the election, announced his intention of meeting the House although lacking a majority.

The party standing as a result of the election was Liberal-Progressives, 23; Conservatives, 16; Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, 7; Social Credit, 5; Independents, 3; Communist, 1; total, 55.

HOOQUIAM, Wash., Sept. 21 (AP).—A savage fight between an eight-foot shark and a large seal, won by the seal, was related today by Ben Philbrick, veteran fisherman.
Philbrick's attention was attracted when he saw a big salmon leap into the air as the seal pursued it. At that juncture the big shark entered in, charging the seal.
Pulling his boat near the battle, Philbrick could see little in the churning water for a time. Then the seal finally sank its teeth in the shark's belly, a foot from the head. For minutes it hung tenaciously, gradually pulling the shark into shallow water, where it killed it.

LOWER COURT BEGINS CASE OF MOTORIST

Herbert Osgood on Preliminary Hearing on Charge Of Manslaughter

DETAILS CONCERNING MOTOR SMASH HEARD

The preliminary hearing of the charge of manslaughter laid against Herbert Osgood, arising out of an accident on Esquimalt Road about 2 o'clock on the morning of September 3, which resulted in the death of Eugene "Bertie" was commenced in Esquimalt police court yesterday before Magistrate Hall. With two more witnesses to be examined, adjournment was taken at 3:30 last evening until 11 o'clock this morning.

Constable G. Stancombe, who investigated the accident, said the tires of the car had been carefully preserved for inspection and while he did not pretend to be an authority on the matter, he was not inclined to believe that there had been a tire blow-out.

BLOW-OUT SUGGESTED

James Buckingham testified he was passed by the fatal car, as he walked along the street, and heard a terrific noise that, for a few moments, left him unable to recall what actually followed. He heard the screaming of brakes and a noise like a toy balloon bursting, but much louder and ascribed it to a tire blow-out.

In reply to Herbert W. Davey, who appeared as counsel for the accused, Constable Stancombe said there was no distortion in the marks of tires on the road, which would be the case, he thought, if there had been a blow-out.

Dr. John H. Moore testified to death of Eugene Rosin having been caused by a fracture of the skull and laceration of the brain.

Constables P. W. Richards and Thomas Stevenson, who took the victims of the accident to hospital, testified the accident seemed worried and excited. He seemed concerned about the condition of his companions.

Chief Peckford said that after getting an ambulance and having the others taken to hospital, he took the accused to the hospital. The accused, he said, smelled strongly of liquor and later became belligerent. Accused told him he was worried over Ernest Strinner, who he said was in the car, and he wanted to go back to search for him.

The evidence of A. H. Dobson, who took photographs of the scene, and of H. F. Bourne, engineer of Esquimalt, as to the plan of the place produced following examination the early morning of the accident, were produced.

Nicholas Lysar, who was with the party, but who escaped with minor injuries, told of having met the accused for the first time that night at a dance. Osgood offered to take witness and Rosin back to work Point Barracks. He said the accused was not drunk, or he would not have gone with him. He drove from the C.C.F. rooms on Fort Street to the Liberty Cafe in a perfectly rational way, witness said.

Chief Peckford said that after getting an ambulance and having the others taken to hospital, he took the accused to the hospital. The accused, he said, smelled strongly of liquor and later became belligerent. Accused told him he was worried over Ernest Strinner, who he said was in the car, and he wanted to go back to search for him.

The evidence of A. H. Dobson, who took photographs of the scene, and of H. F. Bourne, engineer of Esquimalt, as to the plan of the place produced following examination the early morning of the accident, were produced.

Nicholas Lysar, who was with the party, but who escaped with minor injuries, told of having met the accused for the first time that night at a dance. Osgood offered to take witness and Rosin back to work Point Barracks. He said the accused was not drunk, or he would not have gone with him. He drove from the C.C.F. rooms on Fort Street to the Liberty Cafe in a perfectly rational way, witness said.

DEATH TAKES A. H. RIDGMAN

Well-Known Church Worker And Former Customs Official Dies

Albert Hatherley Ridgman, aged seventy-two years, 740 Balmoral Road, for thirty-seven years a member of the Victoria staff of the Department of National Revenue, died in Royal Jubilee Hospital yesterday after an illness of one month. He is survived by two nephews, D. G. Pennock, Victoria, and A. R. Pennock, Edmunds, Wash. Funeral services will be held Thursday, the cortege leaving Sands Mortuary Chapel at 1:50 p.m. and proceeding to St. Barnabas Church, where Rev. N. E. Smith will officiate at 2 o'clock. Later the remains will be interred to Seattle for cremation. Mr. Ridgman was born in Bude Haven, North Cornwall, England, on February 28, 1864, and was educated at public schools there. He later became a teacher, a post he held for five years. He was assistant master at All Saints' Boys' School at Babbacombe, Torquay, for two years.

HERE IN 1885
In July, 1885, Mr. Ridgman came to United States aboard the S. S. City of Rome. He arrived in Victoria in August of that year. His first position here was with the Hudson's Bay Company, with which he remained for seven years. In April, 1892, Mr. Ridgman was appointed assistant in the marine and fisheries office.

Two years later, on July 12, he received an appointment to the local inland revenue office. With the amalgamation of the customs and excise departments in April, 1921, Mr. Ridgman was named stamp clerk and cashier. In April, 1923, he was appointed port constable, which post he held until his retirement on pension on April 1, 1931.

The deceased was well-known in local musical circles. He taught Sunday school and sang in the choir of Christ Church Cathedral before the turn of the century. In 1888, when Rev. W. W. Bolton was rector at St. Paul's Church, Esquimalt, he started a mission in Victoria West and Mr. Ridgman played the hymns and chants on the harmonium. The mission was the start of St. Saviour's parish.

AIDED CHURCHES
In 1891, Mr. Ridgman helped Rev. G. W. Taylor with his Sunday school at St. Barnabas Church. In 1894, Rev. W. H. Arden, who built St. Mark's Church on Bolekine Road, needed an organist and asked Mr. Ridgman to go there and play the harmonium, which he did for nearly a year.

In 1895, Mr. Ridgman returned to the cathedral at the request of Canon Beauland and became superintendent of the Sunday school.

Grateful Woman Appreciates Gift From Red Cross

Letter of Heartfelt Thanks for Artificial Limb Sent to Crippled Man Calls Attention to Necessity for Society's Campaign for $15,000 To Carry on Activities

FOR their great kindness in giving so much assistance in procuring a new artificial limb for a man much in need of one, the Provincial Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society has received a letter of heartfelt thanks from the man's wife.

"At present every step he takes causes him much discomfort, and even pain. We are looking forward with great joy to his walking with ease, for all of which we have to thank the Red Cross, the greatest humanitarian society on this earth and deserving of everybody's support," this grateful woman writes.

This is merely a sample of the work the Red Cross Society is doing. It also explains why they have launched in British Columbia a drive for $15,000.

TAKING WELL

"The campaign-inoculation is taking well," Hugh M. Birch-Jones, British Columbia commissioner of the Red Cross, reported yesterday when interrupted for a few minutes by The Colonist in the midst of a strenuous afternoon. "The 'A' Division explains and workers, twenty-five strong, who went into the field last week, report that the first cases are taking the idea well. In other words, they are responding splendidly to the humanitarian appeal and the drive for $15,000, which is our objective to be used in the peace-time programme, namely, the promotion of health, the prevention of disease, and the mitigation of suffering throughout the world."

The campaign is organized under four divisions: "A," which canvasses specially-selected individuals and organizations; "B," downtown stores and individual business firms; "C," inside organization of employees of large stores, offices, and public buildings and industrial plants; and "D," residential house and neighborhood stores. The last group are being approached by letter.

"In 'A' division there are twenty-five workers, including a splendid group of enthusiastic captains. Some have already returned verbal reports showing that progress is being made with favorable response from the public," says Mr. Birch-Jones.

EFFECTIVE WINDOW

At campaign headquarters, 837 Port Street, passers-by tomorrow morning will discover an attractive scheme of decoration with a uniform Red Cross nurse holding in each hand, leading ribbons attached to cards showing the many peace-time activities of the Red Cross Society in British Columbia. The whole setting will be framed in violet velvet curtains.

Workers are already busy distributing some of the beautifully-designed Red Cross folders that have been specially printed in connection with the present appeal.

This is a most effective bit of work, artistic, on unusually firm paper, and admirably illustrated to suggest the wide diversity of Red Cross activities: a Red Cross nurse at road camps, answering emergency calls by airplane or dog sled out on the frontiers of civilization; the nurse inspecting school drinking water, schools, or conducting a home-nursing class; providing out-patient hospitals; taking cheer to bed-ridden cases and other sick folk out in the hinterlands; and conducting a splendid health educational work among the children of the province.

There is a foreword taken from an address by His Excellency the Rt. Hon. Lord Tweedsmuir, who is president of the Canadian Red Cross Society to the forty-seventh meeting of the Central Council of the organization, and a more direct appeal by Dean Quinlan, chairman of the Victoria Campaign Advisory Committee, fills the last page.

MEETING TOMORROW

There will be a general meeting tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium of the entire campaign personnel, which includes the campaign advisory committee and all workers.

Fire Endangers Actors in Canadian Film

Though it was planned to burn Moody's cottage at Revelstoke during filming of British-Gaumont's film, "The Great Barrier," which tells an epic story of the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway, sound and screen men were not prepared when the building burst into flames prematurely. Roy Emmerton, British actor; Antoinette Cellier, leading lady, and George King, property master, narrowly escaped from the interior by a rear exit, and Donald Duncan, a local extra, was trapped on the roof. Duncan can be seen, left, just before he jumped fifteen feet to safety. He injured his ankles in the leap and Emmerton was slightly cut and burned. At night the fire can be seen at its height, spectators driven back by intense heat.

school is much more than a factory. It is the second parent of the child and should step in when real parents fall down on their job.

The school is trustee for the child, trustee to the parents, to the state, to the future. Enslaved and Wales learned long ago the wastefulness of trying to teach spelling or geography to children who had had no breakfast. Last year school boards provided nearly twenty millions of meals to more than four hundred thousand English children.

So we who are superintendents or trustees or teachers must first of all see that children are not harmed, not harmed much, by the school.

and secondly, we must watch and care that children are not neglected in their homes, but have a decent break.

But these two duties, doing no harm and patching up defects, are both negative and do not slimp the fine vision of body and mind developing in harmony. To think of health as a mere absence of illness or defect or crippling or starvation is a very poor conception. Health should be a positive, radiant, physical glory. What are we doing for the boys and girls who are not handicapped? What are we doing for all boys and girls as normal average boys and girls?

HOLDING TRUST FOR THE WORLD

Gyro Club Hears Message From Rev. Dr. J. B. Armour At Luncheon

Canada as a part of the British Commonwealth of Nations had a great privilege and trust which was being held for the rest of the world. Canadians must take government and the general order of life more seriously to preserve that liberty enjoyed in the Dominion.

This was the message brought by Rev. Dr. J. B. M. Armour, Toronto, general secretary for Canada of the British and Foreign Bible Society, to the Gyro Club at its luncheon yesterday in the Empress Hotel. Just returned from a trip through Europe, Dr. Armour spoke on "Lasting Impressions of a Holiday." He noted the tremendous development in the quality and quantity of housing in Great Britain. The Old Country, he said, was re-emerging its youth and optimism. This was particularly true of London. There was a distinct horror among trade unionists of Communism making inroads into Britain.

MEETING-EMPLOYMENT
The acute unemployment situation was being met by the Government and there was a distinct hopefulness in the entire country. Great Britain had made remarkable progress in the last four years, said Dr. Armour.

President De Valera had a great hold of the Irish Free State, and in Ireland, housing and development were progressing well, he stated. Germany and the German peoples under Hitler were remarkably efficient, claimed Dr. Armour. There was no outward appearance of any serious building up of the nation, but he was confident that Germany now held air supremacy. He suggested that Germany would wait until France was reorganized before Hitler would strike at Russia, thus plunging Europe into another war.

SPIRIT OF LIBERTY
Czechoslovakia, Dr. Armour said, was filled with a spirit of liberty. The people have a great purpose and it was one nation in Central Europe which stood for and represented British democracy. Hungary was waiting the day it would regain its former strong position. Because of its defence of Europe in past years, Hungary claimed Europe owed her a tremendous debt which, as yet, was not forthcoming, said Dr. Armour.

It was only a matter of time before Nazi control of Austria was established, he said. Italy looks upon Canada as a great friend. Mussolini he contended, had started the Ethiopian war to more firmly entrench his position in Italy and in the eyes of the Italian peoples. He concluded with his appeal for Canadians to wake up to their heritage.

ONLY CHANCE
The curate prided himself on his oratorical powers. He was describing the downward path of the sinner, and used the metaphor of a ship drifting and going to pieces on the rocks.

A sailor in the audience was deeply interested. "The waves dash over!" cried the curate. "Her sails are split! Her yards are gone! Her masts are shattered! Her helm is useless! She is driving ashore! There seems no hope! Can nothing be done to save her?"

The sailor rose in his seat, his eyes wide with excitement. "Let go the anchor," he shouted.

COMMISSION FOR HIGHWAYS ASKED.
Malahat Board of Trade Discusses Proposal—Local Members Not In Favor of Change

SHAWNIGAN Lake, Sept. 20.—The September session of the Malahat Board of Trade was held recently at the home of the president, William Mudge, with a good attendance of members. A resolution was brought before the board from the Comox-Courtenay board, requesting the Provincial Government to form a road commission to take over the building and maintenance of all roads outside city limits in the province.

The measure was not endorsed by the local members, who felt that a commission appointed would still be under the party in power to a great extent.

ROAD WIDENING.
A delegation was appointed to interview the Minister of Public Works with reference to the widening of the Old Victoria Road. The secretary was asked to write to Mr. Ford, Dominion Engineer, on the question of a public landing at Cliffside.

A satisfactory report of the Cobble Hill Fall Fair and dance was given by the agricultural committee. With reference to the occasional closing of the Malahat during the present road operations, it was pointed out that Shawnigan cars have to drive as far as Comox Corner, with the possibility of having to go about five miles back to the ferry. In this connection, the board will request temporary traffic lights at Shawnigan and Mill Bay.

The current local discussion as to whether a license is necessary for fishing in Shawnigan Lake if the waters are navigable and under Dominion jurisdiction, will be referred to Major Mosherwell, Dominion Fisheries Superintendent. A third board has been appointed to the Shawnigan River Association, and expects a good attendance at a public hearing to be held in Shawnigan in the near future at which the speakers will be Mr. Bruce McKee and Mr. H. Despard Twigg.

Cowichan Fair Reaches New Attendance Record

Paid Admission on Friday Exceeded Previous Years—Exhibits Praised by Judges—Stamp Collections Form an Interesting Display

DUNCAN, Sept. 21.—Attendance records were broken at the Cowichan Fair, Friday, when at 6 o'clock the number of paid admissions exceeded Friday's showing of the year before. Judging of cattle, which was done Friday afternoon, found a very high quality of exhibits. The showing of male classes was light, but the female classes were well filled. The Judge, S. Howman, of Vancouver, said that Cowichan was justly famous for its Jersey herds, and that the animals shown justified that reputation. Ribbons for grand champion bull and grand champion cow went to E. C. Hawkins' "Lindell" and "Elderlie's Golden Blossom."

QUALITY PAMPS
T. K. Harrop, of Victoria, awarded high praise to the excellent pure-bred Shropshire shown. There was a large entry and the quality fairly uniform. The quality of market lambs was extra good, and there were good classes of large breeding ewes and yearling ewes. Entries in ewe classes were not numerous but were good. Pure-breds were well represented and some very good black hogs were shown. Judging of horses took place Saturday afternoon. Domestic science exhibits were more numerous than for some years. Bottled fruit and vegetables were very fine. Honey classes were light, but butter exhibits were more numerous than usual.

There was a noticeable falling off in number and class of needwork in the ladies' work section, but knitting of high quality and variety was well displayed. A new class for articles made from flour sacks proved popular, and some surprisingly good-looking articles of wearing apparel were shown.

CHILDREN'S SECTION
The children's section of the fair had a large display of work of a high standard, which drew praise from members of the Normal School staff, who acted as judges. The Duncan Consolidated School exhibit of art done in Grade 8 in 1936, was much admired, and the work shown by St. Ann's School was so good that a special prize was awarded.

Duncan Consolidated School was winner of the silver cup for best exhibit, and the prize for competition for rural schools went to Koksilah. Friday evening, pupils of the Duncan Consolidated School gave an excellent display of folk dancing interspersed with well rendered numbers by the school's mixed choir under the leadership of Mr. F. Paritt.

STAMP COLLECTION
A feature of the fair was the stamp exhibition, which drew high praise from the Judge, Ronald M. Angus, of Victoria. Exhibits in the competitive classes exceeded expectations and some very fine examples from well-known collections were on display.

A silver cup was awarded to Mr.

W. J. Davey, of Victoria, for his very fine collection of Hawaiian stamps. This collection was in the choice for second-best exhibit at the Pacific Coast International Exhibition held at Bellingham in April, at which exhibition Mr. Gerald Wellburn, of Duncan, secured first awards. It is well written up with explanatory notes and diagrams, and shows many fine early stamps and blocks, proofs and a fine assembly of the various cancellations of the Hawaiian Islands.

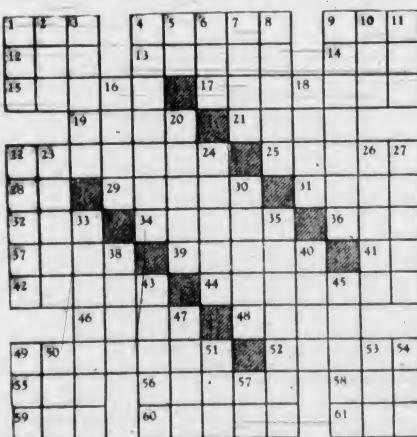

A silver medal was awarded Mr. H. Helen, of Duncan, for his very fine collection of Irish stamps. This collection was beautifully written up by Mr. Helen, and was also illustrated with fine drawings. It is virtually complete, in mint condition, and includes all the errors, such as inverted surcharges and the like, which were well written up by Mrs. Helen and illustrated with many small but elaborate designs. Mr. Hubert Leithaby, of Victoria, was also awarded a bronze medal for his collection of first flight covers, both Canadian and foreign, and numbering some hundreds. Mrs. R. E. Cairns, of Duncan, obtained a bronze medal for her written-up collection of Jubilee stamps of May, 1935.

A bronze medal went to Henry Whitaker for a frame of six interesting pages from his well-known collection of Soudanese stamps, including some early covers with scarce cancellations. An interesting item he displayed was an early "Cameo" type stamp signed by Colonel Stanton, who designed the stamp at the order of General Kitchener, with scant material for the work and inadequate brushes, and who nevertheless evolved one of the most beautiful designs which has appeared on a British Colonial stamp.

BRITISH COLLECTION
Gerald Wellburn, of Duncan, kindly displayed some of the gems of his well-known collection of Great Britain, but not for competition. This collection of British stamps is now famous all over the West, and secured a bronze medal at New York against international competition. Entries in the junior classes were not as numerous as expected, but collections shown were of good quality. James Cairns was praised for the pains taken in writing up his collection of stamps of the Falkland Islands.

The Vancouver Island Philatelic Society, of Victoria, loaned a framed copy of a letter received from Buckingham Palace, from Lord Wigram, in reply to a letter sent at the time of the death of King George V.

DR. R. S. THORNTON CALLED TO REST

Was an Organizer of Medical Association and Former Minister in Manitoba
Vancouver, Sept. 21.—Dr. Robert Sterling Thornton, 73, one of the organizers of the Canadian Medical Association and a former Minister of Education for Manitoba, died here Friday.

Dr. Thornton was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and came to Canada shortly after receiving a medical degree from the University of Edinburgh.
He established himself at Deloraine, Man., where he practised until 1915. Since that time he has lived in Vancouver and Victoria.
Dr. Thornton served in the Manitoba Legislature for eleven years, seven with a minister's portfolio. He also took active part in a sixteen-year struggle which preceded organization of the Canadian Medical Association. He was president of the Medical Council of Canada and Manitoba and was also well known for his legal knowledge as well as for his skill as a physician.

Queen's University in Kingston, Ont. conferred on him a degree of LL.D. on him.
Keen regret was expressed in local Masonic circles yesterday over the death of Dr. R. S. Thornton who was well known here, having been a member of the Victoria Lodge of the order.

He was an uncle of Mrs. Duncan Kennedy, 1034 Linden Avenue, whom he recently visited.

Victorians Stand In Line to View Titania's Palace

Victorians stood and sat in line to see Titania's Palace at the Hudson's Bay Company store yesterday and came away highly praising the splendid display of the old-fashioned furnishings and knowing their silver contribution would go directly to helping crippled children at the Queen Alexandra Hospital.

Although the palace will be on show on the fourth floor of the Hudson's Bay Company store until October 14, the committee in charge is anxious for those intending to see it to come early and thus avoid a last-minute rush.

Empress of Asia Arrived Yesterday Morning After Uneventful Passage.

With a fair passenger list aboard, the Canadian Pacific S.S. Empress of Asia, Capt. A. V. R. Lovegrove, R.N.R., commander, docked alongside Rithet Piers at 7 a.m. yesterday. After leaving a number of travelers, mails and cargo here, the liner continued to Vancouver at 8:45 o'clock. Officers of the ship reported an uneventful passage from Manila to Victoria.

Among the ship's more prominent passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Belzoe and family, the former being district manager for the Chrysler Motor Corporation of Japan, returning to the United States; T. A. Burd, attorney, of Buffalo, on his way home after a business trip to Japan; J. G. Sellar, connected with the Charter Bank of India, Australia and China in Manila, on his way to England on holiday; W. S. Thompson, president of the Super Silk Hosiery Mills, proceeding to London, Ontario; and L. Talmibara, New York business man, who has been visiting Manila.

Other travelers on the liner included Eris McGee, brother of the Mayor of Vancouver, from Manila;

EXHIBIT IS

Photographs on Display Tell
Story of Railway Construction Epic

The finest photographic historical exhibit ever produced in Canada is now on display in the B.C. Coast Steamship waiting room at the local docks. It follows the history of Canada along with incidents in the fifty years of building the Canadian Pacific Railway to its present status.

The exhibit was brought to Victoria by D. McMurray, display agent for the railway at Strathmore, and will, according to him, be available to people in Victoria for the next two weeks.

Faces of the builders of Canada and the Canadian Pacific Railway, long since passed away, are prominent in the display. Many of the bitter cartoons produced in British newspapers protesting the folly of constructing a railway from coast to coast are amusingly shown.

Canada's mountains, rivers and lakes, and most of the outstanding obstacles of nature which were overcome during the construction of the railroad are shown to advantage in a number of photographs.

SAN PEDRO, Calif., Sept. 21 (AP).—The battleship Texas and a British tanker, Scalara, collided today in the fog, the Marine Exchange reported.

The damage to the Texas apparently consisted in a large indentation in the stern. The Exchange said, after scrutinizing the vessel from a distance. Both the battleship and the tanker proceeded to anchor.

The Texas was outbound for target practice off San Clemente Island. The Scalara was inbound from a distance. Both the battleship and the tanker proceeded to anchor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21 (AP).—R.M.S. Queen Mary, Great Britain's record-smashing ocean liner, arrived from England today little the worse for rough weather kicked up by what her master called "your bloody old hurricane."

Sir Edgar Britten, the ship's skipper, said he had throttled down his engines Saturday night to ten knots to avoid the worst of last week's storm. But he made up the time later, he said.

PILOT IS STILL SEMI-CONSCIOUS

NEW WESTMINSTER, Sept. 21 (AP).—Captain J. Moore, Seattle coastal pilot, was in a semi-conscious condition in hospital here today with head injuries, the result of a fall on board the British steamer King John on Friday when he suffered a stroke.

Hospital authorities reported X-ray pictures showed no fracture of the skull as at first reported.

The seventy-year-old pilot was coming to New Westminster as a passenger on the vessel after piloting her to the international boundary, where he turned her over to a Canadian pilot.

As the King John was creeping up the river in a heavy fog, Captain Moore stepped from his cabin and as he neared a companion way stairs, suffered a stroke, falling and striking his head.

His wife was rushed from Seattle by airplane to be at his side here.

Cards 80 to Lead Qualifiers in Canadian Women's Closed Golf Championship on Pointe Claire Links—Mrs. Darling and Miss Ada Mackenzie One Stroke Behind

POINTE CLAIRE, Que., Sept. 21. — The field of the Canadian women's closed golf championship, second in importance to the recently concluded Ontario championship, was drawn through the qualifying round today and from it emerged Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen, of Toronto, as medal winner.

The Ontario champion, a knacker on national title duels for years, went out in the heavy wind and played a disastrous round of 80, five over par, to lead thirty-two qualifiers into the first round of match play tomorrow. The survivors will play two rounds on Wednesday, the semi-finals Thursday and the final Friday.

The course, not considered as difficult as Royal Montreal, where Mrs. A. B. Darling, of Montreal, won the open on Saturday, failed to take a toll of the leading stars, and a 93 was good enough to qualify.

ONE STROKE BEHIND
Mrs. Darling, looking for a sweep of the titles—a feat accomplished only twice and both times by Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto—shared the runner-up position with red-haired Margery Kirkham, another Mont-

PHILIPS GAINS ON IDLE PAUL WANER

By the Associated Press.
"Babe" Philips, of the Dodgers, picked up more ground yesterday in his chase after Paul Waner, of the Pirates, and the National League batting leadership. While Waner was idle, with an average of .376, Philips got two hits in four times at bat to boost his mark two points to .370.

Smashing the two-day-old record of Marcus Docile, Nuve Alta, owned by R. Emburg, Calgary, galloped to an impressive victory, Saturday, in the Victoria Handicap, feature event on the day's racing card at the Willows track.

The nine-year-old gelding ran the six furlongs and thirty yards in 1:14 4-5, three-fifths of a second faster than the previous mark. The cameraman caught the finish of the race just as Nuve Alta was pushing his nose under the wire.

Setback Virtually Eliminates Chicago From National League Race

NEW YORK, Sept. 21. — The Cardinals' victory over the Cubs while the Giants were idle maintained the New Yorkers' six-game lead over the National League pack today, and virtually eliminated the Cubs from any hope of retaining their crown.

The Giants need but two more victories to clinch the pennant, even if the Cards win all their remaining games. The Cubs, by winning all the rest of their schedule, can get no better than a tie for the title, even if the Giants drop their remaining games.

The situation after today's schedule:

Chicago	50	41	6

Wet grounds forced cancellation of the Giants' scheduled game against the A's at Philadelphia today, but they will be here tomorrow and the next day in continuation of their three-game series. Giants then move to Boston for three games in two days, September 24 and 25, before returning to the Polo Grounds for a two-game home stand against Brooklyn Dodgers on September 26 and 27.

Cardinals play all remaining games in St. Louis, opening a four-game stand against Cincinnati tomorrow, Saturday. Chicago Cubs replace Cincinnati with one game each that day and Sunday.

Chicago will go to St. Louis fresh from a three-game engagement at Pittsburgh, which opens tomorrow.

NOSE OUT CUBS
CHICAGO, Sept. 21. — The St. Louis Cardinals required second place in the National League today by nailing out the Cubs, 5 to 4.

The gas house gang broke a tie by scoring a run in the ninth, and held onto their lead by sending "Dizzy" Dean in as a relief pitcher when the Cubs threatened in their half of the final frame.

In a cynical moment, Dickens said money could do, anything; others less embittered refused to exaggerate its utility; it could make a man laugh; it couldn't con-

Jane Dixon Says:

A YOUNG MAN IN LOVE WHOSE GIRL GOES AWAY TO COLLEGE TO STUDY NEED NOT WORRY ABOUT HER "PINING AWAY" DURING HER ABSENCE

Surprise! We've heard a lot about the girl who wonders whether she should sit home and wait for the boy of her heart, to finish his college course. Here's a reversal of form.

A boy, or rather a young man, wonders whether he should sit home and wait until the girl finishes her college course.

Being in on this Human Relations column is a lot like looking at life through a microscope. "I hope you enjoy it as much as I do. You should if you are humanity-conscious."

Jane Dixon: I'm a young fellow of twenty. The girl is nineteen. Shortly she's leaving for school. What I want to know is—which of us is right? She wants to break up our twosome now and forget it for a while because of her school work.

HE'S DISSATISFIED, BUT CONFIDENT

She has invited me to her school dances, and I want to continue seeing her. I suggested I call on her at her school every two weeks. Otherwise the only times I will see her is when she comes home for vacations and at the school dances.

Why should we continue to be without one another? She will only pine away between times, as I will.

Don't you think we both would be happier if we saw one another more regularly? We'd have something to which to look forward.

I don't know whether or not I'm clear, but it amounts to this: Should we continue to go on as we have even though she is away at school?

She suggests breaking up now and seeing each other during vacations and at dances. We'll be in love while she is home, and then forget it until she comes home again. This sounds plenty foolish to me.

She loves me, I know, because she would marry me tomorrow were it not for her school work.—Young Man in Love.

THEIR "VACATION LOVE" IS NONSENSE

Answer: You're tilting with windmills, Young Man in Love.

If the girl is more interested in her school than in you, why don't you be a regular soldier and allow her to go the way that her mind dictates and her heart desires?

She is right. You are wrong. She is not going to college to think about you or to look forward to seeing you—she is going to college to study to prepare herself for her future, to make the most of her opportunity.

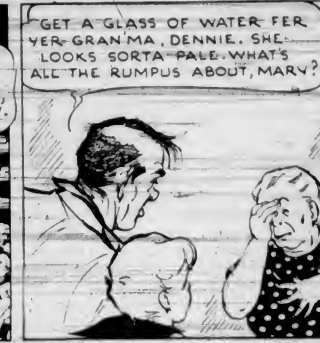

Since she has suggested "breaking up," you need not worry about her "pining away." Nor will you be in any imminent danger of doing so if you will be fair enough and brave enough to accept her wishes and to abide by them.

Your talk about "loving one another during vacation" and then pining until the next vacation comes along is, of course, pure nonsense. The love bug is not a hibernating insect. It's an all-year-round proposition.

Go to the college dances if they interest you, be friendly, but make no rash promises about being on hand to play the ardent suitor when she comes home. If she is strong enough to subordinate her love to her education, surely you, a man, should have enough stamina to bow to her decision and wait for June and July to supply the flowers.

Rose of Soledad

by GEORGE E. HOLT

SYNOPSIS

When O'Hara, of the Baltimore O'Hara family, turns up in his executive airplane to help out the family money, he finds that his father, who has been a rancher in California, has been killed. He is the only one who can be done with a ranch in California. He is the only one who can be done with a ranch in California. He is the only one who can be done with a ranch in California.

INSTALLMENT IV

Shane was startled. "If the title to La Paloma would stand in the courts? Why—why shouldn't it?"

"I don't mean to imply," Don Timoteo went on, "that your father didn't get a proper title to the land from Jared Golden. It goes back farther than that. There was a claimant to the place when Golden had it—but that claimant was so poor he couldn't get anywhere with his case. And Golden was rich—at that time—and powerful. But Golden's title was, I really think, at least open to question. It's a long and involved story—but that's the gist of it."

"So," said Shane, "if there was a flaw in Golden's title, my father and mine in turn are open to question."

"That's it," assented Don Timoteo, nodding his big head.

"And who, sir," Shane asked, "is the claimant?"

"His name," Don Timoteo replied,

"is Sam Verdugo. Black Sam, they call him. And he is the present manager of the La Paloma ranch."

Shane whistled.

"Not so good, that, sir," he said. "I mean—possession. Even as manager."

Again Don Timoteo nodded confirmation.

"Was Mr. Golden a friend of your father?" he asked. "Or the contrary?"

"The ranch is mine," he said. "But I have the deed for it," Shane reminded him. Quick anger flared in Verdugo's black eyes. His next words came with a hiss like that of a snake.

"The contrary, I'm afraid," replied Shane. As I told you, father had to take it in a debt settlement. Although I think father treated him as generously as he deserved to be treated. He wasn't well, quite as you board, I've heard father say."

"That," suggested Don Timoteo, "may be the reason he recommended Black Sam as manager. It would strengthen Sam's hand against your father. A little deferred revenge as it were. Golden was vindictive. And not honest enough to suffer from it."

Even Shane O'Hara, a tenderfoot, could see that the Rancho Paloma was run down, that slackness and carelessness ruled. Drunken rats postrated—a sagging gate marked the entrance to La Paloma. A dozen paces beyond the gate lay a piece of farm machinery—Shane could not recognize what it was—rusting on its side. A score of noisy curs ran forth to bark at the two horsemen, but at any rate they showed no sign of blood or breeding.

A hundred yards or so beyond the gateway the road twisted, bringing into view a spreading house and beyond it a huddle of barns and sheds. Shane noted that the roofs of the barns were scarred where the shingles had been torn off by the wind, and not replaced; that there was broken glass in the windows.

As for the house, what had once been a ranch dwelling perhaps not equal to, but at any rate approximating the status of that of Soledad, its white plaster was scaling off the dome walls like human skin peels from a blister. There, too, were broken panes of glass in the windows; a green shutter hanging by one hinge. And worst of all, an arched arcade along the front cluttered up with a wheelbarrow, garden tools, rolls of previously used burlap, empty resinous tins—all the odds and ends whose place was properly in the barns and sheds on an even decently managed place.

Just who—and what—was this Black Sam Verdugo? Shane asked. Before Don Timoteo could answer a man appeared in the doorway of the house and came toward them.

"You speak my name?" he asked. "You want to see Sam Verdugo?"

"Oh, hello, Sam," Tom Timoteo greeted him.

"Howdy, Don Timoteo. Howdy, sir. He came up to them. "Will you dismount?"

"No, Sam," said Don Timoteo. "I think not. Not just now. At least I shan't. I just brought my friend over. Mr. O'Hara, this is Sam Verdugo."

Verdugo had lifted his hand, a smile was on his dark face—but at the name of O'Hara the smile dropped, the smile vanished. His black eyes smoldered.

"O'Hara?" he said slowly. "Son of Mr. Fernando O'Hara?"

"Yes, Sam. Properly," Shane said, "this ranch from Mr. Golden. You're the manager, I believe. His own hand remained on the pommel of his saddle."

"I am the manager, yes," Black Sam snarled. "But I am also—"

"But I am also," Don Timoteo interrupted. "Don't you stop. Then shrug and throw back the look with a quick malevolence."

"But I am also the rightful owner of La Paloma," he said. Why should I not say it—now? Why wait? I knew that sometime some one would arrive to whom I should have to say it. So I say it now. This ranch is mine."

"But I have the deed to it," Shane reminded him, thinking that he did not at all like this brown, black-moustached, black-eyed Mexican, or whatever he was.

"You have the deed, Mister O'Hara," Sam snarled. "But—but I have the right—and the possession."

Shane still kept his temper, and Don Timoteo, watching him, was pleased at this. It was one of the marks of a thoroughbred.

"You have the right to prove your claim in the courts," offered Shane. "As for possession—" He stopped to think. Did he want to keep this man as manager under any conditions? No, he told himself. "As for possession—I imagine that the law will give me possession, until you prove that your right to it is better than mine."

Quick anger flared in Verdugo's black eyes. His next words came with a hiss like that of a snake.

"Oh! You will put me off, eh? You will throw me out and take possession, mister?" But I, Sam Verdugo, say you will not. No. Never. Except over my dead body. Understand that, now. Understand it well. Over my dead body only!"

He was panting now with his anger and excitement, and his black eyes snapped venomously. Shane studied him in silence for a moment. Then he, in turn, shrugged his shoulders, turned his horse. "I think, Mr. Delane," he said, quietly, "there is no more to be said, here—at present. Shall we go?"

They rode toward the gate, leaving Black Sam Verdugo standing with clenched fists and clenched teeth, glaring balefully at them. Or, more precisely, at Shane O'Hara.

"You'll have trouble with him," Don Timoteo said as they rode slowly homeward. "He's no good. On a lot of different counts he's no good. He's an American citizen, but he's still Mex for all of that. A bad Mex, I mean. And while a good Mexican is as fine a fellow as you can find, a bad one is just as bad as a bad American."

"I'll let the courts take care of the matter," Shane replied. "But first I'll have to look into this matter of title. If the ranch is mine, I want it. If it isn't—the excitable Sam can have it and welcome. I'll go down to the county seat and see what I can see."

"A good plan," approved Don Timoteo. "But incidentally, you have no place to live for the present. If you think you'd be comfortable at Soledad, la casa es suya. My house is yours."

There were more reasons than one although there was one dominating reason, why Shane wanted to accept this offer, and why he did instantly accept it, without humming and hawing out of imitation politeness.

"I'll be glad," he said. "You're—you're a brick, Mr. Delane."

"Don Timoteo sounds less formal," suggested that one. "Use it if you wish."

"Thank you—Don Timoteo," said Shane.

They rode in silence for a space. Then Shane spoke.

"You spoke of Mexicans, Don Timoteo. Just what is the distinction between Mexicans and Spaniards? I mean, old California was Spanish, not Mexican. After it became American, well, I've read that the old Spanish families mixed with the new American families."

He hesitated. Don Timoteo said: "Just as my own family did. My grandfather married a Spanish lady, my father, being half Spanish blood, married a girl from Dublin. So I'm rather mixed as to blood. And I—my wife, and there was a strangely tender note in the deep voice, "my wife was a blue-eyed lass whose people hailed from Carrickfergus, on the Northern Irish coast."

"But—but what is the difference, Don Timoteo," Shane asked, puzzled, "between the so-called Spaniard of early days and the Mexican of today? Nothing I've ever read makes that clear."

"It's this way, O'Hara," Don Timoteo explained. "There were Spaniards and Mexicans even in the days of Spanish California. The descendants of the conquistadores of Mexico kept the blood strain pure. Didn't mix with the true Mexican—that is, the Aztec blood. Those who held the great grants in Upper California, went American as we'd say today. Married Americans. But south of the line—the Spanish blood grew more and more mixed with the Mexican, so that a different breed was produced. Of course, there are still families in Mexico who are proud of their pure Spanish blood, almost as proud as some of the Mexicans are of their pure Aztec strain—although that's mighty rare. At any rate, the point is, that the pure blooded Spaniard of Mexico apt to look upon the native strain much as the Mayflower descendants look upon those equally good Americans, Von Yonson and Hans Schmidt and Patrick O'Connor. Largely, I think, honey."

The slang word fell strangely from Don Timoteo's lips, as though it tasted a little arid.

"And the—the people—those Americans who are the descendants of the old Spanish families in California. How do they feel?" asked Shane.

"Oh, my son," Don Timoteo laughed, "we're mongrels, and we admit it. But we're mongrels who carry on like the best of blood—strain. The Spanish is getting pretty thin—but it's still there—it's still there. And it crops out peculiarly now and again. Like the Irish. He chuckled in his beard. "Toss, now—it looks to me like she was about half Irish and half Spanish. Her grandmother and grandfather over again. Crazy over music and flowers and poetry and fairy tales—and ready to fight her weight in wildcats at the drop of a hat."

Riding along, Shane chewed on this, and found it fragrant.

"And this Don Fernando Miller," he said, at last. "He seems much more Spanish—or Mexican—than I am."

"Than I do, eh?" Don Timoteo finished for him, laughing. "Well, there's a reason, son. Ferdinand Miller has more Spanish and Mexican blood, because he has both. I think his mother was an American woman; all the rest of his ancestors were from across the Line. I take it—" He paused a moment, but finished what he had begun. "I take it you aren't very 'simpat' to Don Fernando." There was an odd smile in his eyes which Shane could not perceive, and which might have caused him to give a frank answer had he seen it. As it was he remained silent.

YOUR BOY—will you have money to give him a start in life?

The IMPERIAL Child's Thrift Plan

You plan to give him chances you never had—opportunities to enjoy sports, a college education, perhaps, and financial help when he wants to launch out for himself.

Those are your hopes. But will they materialize? When the time comes will you be pinched for the two or three thousand dollars he may need?

There is a way out! Just deposit with us a small sum each year on an Imperial Child's Thrift Plan. Then, at the proper time we will pay over to him, or to you on his account, the money you have provided to see him through. This policy will teach your boy from his earliest years, the value of thrift and forethought.

And note this. If you should die before your child becomes of age the Company takes your place and makes the premium deposits for him until he reaches the age of 21. Then if the policy has not reached maturity, he can make the remaining deposits himself.

Fathers! This provides an ideal savings plan for your boy. Ask us to send you full particulars, without obligation.
